Mariah Okrongly

Program Director

Mariah joins Bedford2030 having worked in an operational role for her entire career. Her most recent role prior to Bedford2030 was Chief Operating Officer and co-founder of the tech startup ThankView, based in New York City. Mariah has always been passionate about the environment and is excited to be able to channel her operational and project management skills into initiatives for Bedford2030. Mariah graduated from Boston College with an economics degree and lives in Ridgfield with her husband Andrew, daughter Joan and their two cats.

Mariah runs Bedford 2030's energy and transportation division, and is currently coordinating Bedford's application to the Climate Smart Communities Silver Level Certification.
